DIDN'T SHOOT AT DOCTOR NEAR DOORWAY, SAYS MRS. MABEL KENYON

In the course of a persistent cross-axamination of five hours in the superior court here Monday, Mrs. Mabel Kenyon, of Stonington, denied strongly that the death of Dr. Herbert Tetlow had occurred in any other way than what she had previously testified to in her direct examination in her trial on the charge of shooting him on June Illt, last.

POETRY

JUA DALY'S DIVE. Twas jolly down on Hickory Creek
The days I was a boy.
How jolly? Say, now—words are weal
To paint our urchin joy.
We'd lish a while, then wind our pole.
And seek the hole to swim;
flut not one in that swimming-hole
Could ever swim like Jim.

Lithe as a willow, Jim was strong.

And he'd a builet head;
And aino—traihful be my song—
That head was blazing red.
I view him yet—and always will
His memory survive.

For every lad his yell would still
To watch Jim Daly dive.

He'd climb out on a hickory limb,

Red head, and body white,

Then poise, and plunge, a shining rim—

A meteor in flight!

No splash made he upon the stream,

No ripple left his rive:

With grace 'twould thrill an artist's dream

To see Jim Daly dive.

ind when he to the surface came
The yelling would begin;
ind to the swimmer sweet was fame
Oh, my, how Jim would grin!
Then all leaned in; the water churned,
The creek seemed just alive
Though long we strove, and much w
